

AHF 2027 Research Submissions

Copyright License and Submission Terms

By submitting an abstract, ePoster, video, or related presentation materials (collectively, the "Submission") for consideration at the Anterior Hip Foundation (AHF) 2027 Annual Meeting, you agree to the following terms.

1. Grant of License

If your Submission is accepted, you grant AHF a non-exclusive, royalty-free, worldwide, perpetual license to:

- Publish, reproduce, distribute, display, and share the Submission in connection with AHF 2027 and future AHF educational activities.
- Include the Submission in event programs, proceedings, online platforms, recordings, and educational collections or compilations.
- Make the Submission available through the AHF website, event app, social media channels, and other digital or physical formats.
- Make reasonable formatting, technical, or editorial adjustments without changing the scientific content or meaning of the Submission.

This license includes the right for AHF to authorize service providers and distribution partners to use the Submission for these purposes.

2. Presentations and Recordings

If your Submission is selected for presentation, you also grant AHF permission to:

- Record your presentation, including audio and video.
- Reproduce and display your slides, ePoster, video, and other presentation materials alongside the recording.

- Publish, stream, archive, and share these materials for educational and promotional purposes through current or future media platforms.

3. Copyright and Ownership

You and your co-authors retain copyright ownership of your original Submission.

AHF retains copyright in any original collective works or compilations it creates that incorporate your Submission, without affecting your ownership of the underlying material.

Because this license is non-exclusive, you remain free to publish, present, or distribute your research elsewhere, subject to any applicable third-party agreements or publication restrictions.

4. Author Responsibilities and Permissions

By submitting, you confirm that:

- You are authorized to submit the work and grant the permissions described in this agreement on behalf of all authors and contributors.
- You own the necessary rights to the Submission or have obtained permission from the relevant rights holders.
- The Submission does not infringe any copyright, privacy, confidentiality, or other third-party rights.
- Any third-party copyrighted or proprietary materials have been used with appropriate permissions and attribution.
- Any patient information, clinical images, or surgical videos have been appropriately de-identified, and any necessary patient consent or institutional authorization for presentation, recording, and publication has been obtained.
- Any required research ethics approvals and relevant disclosures have been obtained or provided.
- You and your co-authors are responsible for the accuracy and scientific integrity of the Submission.
- You will not receive compensation from AHF for publication, distribution, or use of the Submission or presentation materials.

5. Public Availability and Publication

Accepted Submissions may be made publicly available in connection with AHF 2027 and may remain accessible through AHF educational platforms after the event.

Submissions and presentations may be referenced, linked to, or shared by AHF, attendees, media representatives, and other third parties, subject to applicable copyright laws.

Authors are responsible for determining whether public presentation or publication of their Submission could affect subsequent publication in a scientific journal or other venue.

6. Withdrawal and Removal

Authors may request withdrawal of their Submission by contacting AHF before publication or presentation.

AHF will make reasonable efforts to accommodate withdrawal or removal requests. However, once materials have been published, distributed, recorded, or archived, AHF cannot guarantee their complete removal from all platforms or third-party collections.

7. Acceptance of Terms

By submitting your materials, you confirm that you have read and agree to these terms and that you have the authority to grant the permissions described above.
